WALL STREET MAN KILLS A WOMAN, THEN HIMSELF

Louis G. Hampton, of the United States Trust Company, Shoots Down Pretty Salesgirl in Their Room at Hotel.

Upon two slabs in the Morgue to-day there lay side by side the body of a woman in the full flush of youth and beauty and the body of an oldish man, with regular, refined features and iron-gray hair. Just over the woman's heart, in the powder-blistered flesh, were four pistol wounds and a bullet from the same weapon had crashed into the brain of the man, Louis Sinclair Hampton, assistant secretary of the United States Trust Company, of No. 45 Wall street. The girl was one whose beauty had fascinated him and whom he killed late last night in a room of the Hotel Grifon, at No. 19 West Ninth street, just before he committed suicide.

The woman slain by the middle-aged financier was Victoria I. Tackow, twenty-nine years old, who has been living with her father, John, her invalid mother, and her brother, Stanislaus, at No. 231 East Thirtieth street. For the past six years she has been employed in a big department store.

The desire to "slay the beautiful woman" must have seized Hampton suddenly, for he had been most loving in his attentions to her since Thursday afternoon, when the couple appeared at the Grifon. Hampton was known at the Grifon. He has been going there for a month or more with the handsome, dark-haired young woman for dinner. He appeared Thursday about noon and asked for a room.

"I want a nice room, where there is light and air," he told Annie Holman, an employee, who was at the desk. He was shown to a third floor room in the front, and this he took, paying $2 in advance for it. Three hours later, and the young woman appeared at the hotel and registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair, Burlington, Vt."

Hampton had introduced his companion as his wife on previous occasions, but he had not mentioned the name Sinclair. However, he and the beautiful woman were shown to the room.

They appeared during the afternoon and evening. At the dinner table he read the afternoon papers to her. So well dressed and distinguished looking were they that in spite of the difference in their ages they attracted attention, partly due to the man's loverlike manner.

Hampton was never from her side an instant, and he rested his eyes on her black hair and olive complexion, now and then whispering to her.

At breakfast yesterday the man was as loverlike as he had been the evening

(Special to The Evening World.)

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, Oct. 27.—Frank Gill, a 7 to 1 chance played down from 1 to 1, won the Lynbrook Handicap for two-year-olds in smashing style at Jamaica this afternoon. Lucky Jack McGinnis, owner of Frank Gill, is believed to have cleaned up $20,000 on the race. They're off, a heavily played favorite, made the pace, followed by Frank Gill and Eddie Ware.

Once the stretch was reached Frank Gill came away swinging and won easily. Adoration just beat Toureane for the place.

Coy Maid and Dolly Spanker fought it out in the Southold Stakes. They came through the stretch stride for stride. Coy Maid won in the last jump, Oxford, the favorite, was three lengths away.

Miller Left at the Post. Keator, a 3 to 5 chance in the opening event, gave the plungers an awful shock by getting left at the post. The shock was the greater because Miller had the mount. With Keator out of the way Alencon made all the running and won cleverly from Gambirinus, the second choice.

Onatas with Miller up was off last in the second race, but Miller gradually made up the lost ground with a rush in the final sixteenth and won by a scant length from Giovanni Balerio. Onatas was a strong favorite.

ARREST IN HARVARD DORMITORY ROBBERIES.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 27.—Lester Lake, twenty-five years old, has been taken into custody by Chief of Police Shay, of Gardner, on charge of larceny on information from the police of Cambridge, that the prisoner was wanted for the famous Harvard dormitory robbery of jewelry and clothing amounting to about $1,200 in February, 1905. During that month there were a number of mysterious robberies at the college and the police at first believed that a student or students were responsible.

The clue upon which Lake was arrested was the recovery of a watch in a Boston pawnshop, redeemed a few days ago, and sent to Lake's address in Gardner, where the man has been for three weeks.

The prisoner admits having lived in Boston last year, but strenuously denies any connection with the Harvard robberies, claiming that he purchased the watch in question in Bangor several months ago. The watch, that is the clue in the case was stolen from J. R. Sportswell, of Cambridge, among other valuables on Feb. 25, 1905.
